Ramener des ids pour faire des requetes plus rapide

- Avec ces IDs en main, utilisez WP_Query et son paramètre post__in pour faire une SEULE requête regroupant tous vos éléments.

✈️ Petit focus sur un truc ultra utile mais souvent sous-estimé : pourquoi on devrait laisser les champs relationnels #ACF nous retourner des IDs plutôt que de les formater direct 📌 #WordPress #devtips

1 ACF et ses champs relationnels, c'est le couteau suisse du dev WordPress. Mais comme pour tout outil, l'usage qu'on en fait peut tout changer. Vous savez, cette option de formatage automatique dans ACF ? Parions-en. 😊

2 Par défaut, ACF peut formater la donnée d'un champ relationnel pour vous retourner... tout et n'importe quoi : posts complets, images, etc. Pratique ? Oui. Efficace ? Hmm, pas toujours. 🚫

3 Voici le hic : chaque fois que vous formatez une donnée, ACF fait une requête pour chaque élément. Imaginez un champ avec 10, 20, 50 éléments... Ça fait beaucoup de requêtes, non ? 🚫

4 Plus de requêtes = plus de temps de chargement = un site plus lent. Et on sait tous que la vitesse, sur le web, c'est la vie. Surtout pour SEO et l'UX. 🚫
